(up to pay grade 13 TV-L, 40 hours/week)

The position is available from October 2026 for a period of four years, with the option of extension. A part-time arrangement is possible.

Our research and teaching focus on the economic behaviour of firms and individuals in the context of globalisation, migration, and structural change. A central element of our research is the empirical analysis of economic phenomena based on large individual-level datasets.

Your responsibilities will include:

- teaching duties amounting to 4 hours per week during term time (Semesterwochenstunden)
- your own research, comprising at least 50 percent of working time, in pursuit of further academic qualification (e.g. PhD or habilitation), publications
- supporting the Chair's research activities as well as contributing to academic self-administration

Your profile:

- Master degree in economics or a related field
- interest in and knowledge of applied microeconomics and international economics
- interest in, and very good knowledge of, econometrics and the application of empirical methods
- very good programming skills in R and/or Stata
- very good command of spoken and written English
- initiative, creativity, and strong analytical skills
- a keen interest in research

Desirable selection criteria

- experience and expertise in working with individual-level and/or foreign trade data
- experience in developing and implementing independent research ideas

We offer:

- attractive remuneration with financial stability, regular pay adjustments, and an annual special payment
- occupational benefits (e.g. retirement provision through VBL, capital-forming benefits, job ticket)
- collectively agreed annual leave plus non-working days on 24 and 31 December
- flexible working arrangements and family-friendly working conditions
- and much more...

Please submit your application, quoting the above reference number, as a single PDF file by 20.09.2026 to: bewerbung@europa-uni.de (application data will be deleted without delay once the selection procedure has been completed). Questions regarding the position may be directed by e-mail to: geishecker@europa-uni.de. Interviews are expected to take place on Frankfurt (Oder) in early October 2026.

Applications should be submitted digitally in English and include the following documents: a letter of motivation, a detailed curriculum vitae, academic transcripts and references, a list of publications where applicable, a sample publication (PDF), a research proposal outlining the development of a research project (max. 4 pages), and a proposed outline for one MA and one BA seminar related to the subject area of this position (title and a brief description of approx. 10 lines each).

The Europa-Universität Viadrina Foundation is actively committed to diversity and equal opportunity among all its staff and pursues the goal of being a non-discriminatory institution that welcomes and protects people in their diversity within the university community.
