COMMUNICATING IN FORUMS

What for?
Forums can be recognized by the speech bubbles. There are two types of forums:
For announcements: Teachers communicate important information to students, such as a short notice cancellation. Every participant is obliged to receive these forum contributions by e-mail. Students cannot reply to the announcements or write new contributions themselves.
For exchange: For discussions, debates, questions and the sending of files, there are forums where all course participants can make contributions and reply to others. It is also possible to send file attachments. You can only find out what kind of forum it is when you have opened a topic in the forum and are offered an opportunity to reply.

Opening a Forum
Click on the speech bubbles or the text next to them to open the forum.

A new view will appear. Here you can see all posts of the forum in an overview. If you want to read individual articles, click on the Topic that interests you (here "How to find us")
If necessary, use the function "Search in the forum". You will find it in the upper right corner next to the quick navigation bar.
